All our direct care staff are trained in Crisis Prevention Institute Training (CPI). CPI Training teaches practical, research-based skills to help staff prevent and safely handle challenging behavior. The Nonviolent Crisis Intervention program helps staff recognize early signs that a child is becoming upset, calm situations before they get worse, and respond safely during behavioral emergencies. Physical intervention is utilized as the last result in all situations. Additionally, on a weekly basis, the multidisciplinary treatment team and clinical staff conduct a formal review of residents involved in multiple physical holds. These reviews analyze potential clinical or environmental triggers, including pharmacological adjustments, therapeutic processing, and family visitation or contact. Monthly, the Quality Assurance Committee evaluates aggregate restraint and seclusion data to identify systemic trends related to length of stay, medication protocols, and specific staff-resident interaction patterns.
